19. 밑줄 친 They[they]가 가리키는 대상이 나머지 넷과 다른 것은?

When you think of millionaires, you may think that ① they always wear diamonds and drive expensive cars. Actually, ② they are far more likely to be wearing old jeans and driving an old pickup truck. ③ They don't try to look different from ordinary people, say authors Thomas Stanley and William Danko in their book. ④ They surveyed the rich in America and found that the main secret that they could be wealthy was modest spending. In fact, eighty percent of millionaires in America made their fortunes in one generation. ⑤ They didn't inherit their money from their family.

26. A new study suggests that children who often get serious ear infections are twice as likely to _____ later in life than kids with healthier ears. To explain these findings, lead researcher Linda Bartoshuk from the University of Florida says repeated ear infections might permanently damage a nerve called the chorda tympani. This nerve starts at the front of the tongue, where it picks up taste sensations. From there, the nerve runs through the middle ear to the brain, where it delivers messages about what the tongue just tasted. When the nerve is damaged, she says, people become extra sensitive to the feel or texture of fatty foods, such as butter, and an increased sensitivity to fatty sensations makes people like those kinds of foods even more than usual. [3점]

*chorda tympani 고실끈신경

- ① become overweight                      ② suffer from deafness
 ③ get severe headaches                  ④ have a mental disorder
 ⑤ lose their sense of taste

27. A group of ecologists from the University of California released an interesting report about insects and global warming. According to the report the average temperature in Central Europe has gone up approximately 1.5°C. During this time nearly 50 species of butterflies and moths have changed their _____. For example, if butterflies lay eggs once a year, they now do twice. Logically, since it is warmer, the breeding season is beginning earlier, and insects are given more time to mate. Furthermore, the warmer temperatures also speed up the development of the insects, and they are ready to reproduce earlier in their lives. Everything is happening sooner and faster.

- ① eating habits                              ② breeding places
 ③ range of habitat                          ④ body shape and color
 ⑤ reproductive patterns

28. In a university four women pretended to be students in a class. The first woman attended one lecture, the second one ten lectures, and the third fifteen. The fourth didn't attend any of the lectures. At the end of the course, students were shown photos of the four women and asked about their feelings and attitudes toward them. Despite the fact that the students had no personal contact with them, the preference toward the women was related to _____. The woman who didn't attend any lectures was liked the least, and the woman who attended all the lectures was liked the most.

- ① their grades in class
 ② what lecture they had attended
 ③ when the students had seen them
 ④ their attitudes toward the professor
 ⑤ their repeated exposure to students

29. It's usually a waste of time and energy to put a lot of effort into assigning blame or determining who is at fault. That's because fault exists in the past, and the past cannot be changed. When you become too focused on who is at fault, you can easily lose sight of the positive actions that can be taken to solve the problem. The thing to be concerned with is not what happened, but what you're going to do about it. Put your focus not on what should or should not have been done, but rather on _____. [3점]

- ① the hardship you have suffered
 ② who should take the responsibility
 ③ the best of what can be done now
 ④ determining which side you are on
 ⑤ how much time you spent on blaming

30. 다음 글에 드러난 Simon의 심경 변화로 가장 적절한 것은? [1점]

The walls of the barn were melting down in orange and yellow flames. Black smoke rose from the entrance. At that moment, Simon couldn't be sure, but he thought he'd just seen a small figure moving inside the fire. "Hey!" Simon yelled, stepping forward. The roof of the barn began to crumble, splashing sparks and flames. Simon jumped back. "Simon! Come out!" Harry shouted. Simon pointed and yelled, "I think there's someone in there!" He ran into the barn, shaking Harry's hand off. He found a boy rolling on the ground with his clothes catching fire. Simon extinguished the flames and dragged him out of the barn. The boy's legs were a little burned but he seemed alright. Watching the boy carried away in an ambulance, he took a deep breath.

The people who went on blind dates have one thing in common. They believe in (A) defining/denying characteristics in accordance with blood types. Of course the information people pay attention to is a partner's appearance and academic background. However, as each partner (B) conceals/reveals typical traits of a blood type described in various sources, people are adding the blood type information as a tool to predict partners' character in advance. Interestingly enough, this news is not an isolated case, but a (C) common/rare phenomenon in our society. A recent survey showed that seven out of ten women believe that a person's blood type is an important factor in selecting a date.

When my son, Gustav, was only two or three months old, I started to read Pinocchio to him even though the book was aimed at four-year-old kids—as ① often as I could, over and over. I found this boring, of course. Gustav, however, loved it, and the results of this experiment made all my efforts ② worthwhile. Not only did he start talking much ③ sooner than most children do, but when he was just two, he could memorize nearly all the pages. When hearing just one or two words on a page, he would ④ recite the rest of the page like a parrot. The vocabulary in this book soon became part of his everyday speech. In terms of language development, he was soon miles ⑤ behind his age group.

There was a man who played the piano in a bar. He was a good pianist and people came just to hear him play. But one night, a customer told him he wanted him to sing a song. The man said, "I don't sing." _____ (A) _____, the customer was persistent and told the bartender, "I'm tired of listening to the piano. I want him to sing!" The bartender shouted, "Hey! If you want to get paid, sing!" A piano player who had never sung in public sang for the very first time. And nobody had ever heard the song Mona Lisa sung the way it was sung that night by Nat King Cole! Because he had to sing that night he was able to become one of the best-known entertainers in America. _____ (B) _____, he would have lived the rest of his life as a no-name piano player in a no-name bar.

34. We often think of city living as unhealthy due to overcrowding and pollution, especially in times when there are many diseases and infections going around. Yet recent research suggests that where your ancestors came from, whether it was the city or the countryside, could affect your resistance to infections. People in crowded cities had to develop an immunity just to survive. Because in towns and cities people intermingled far more closely, there was a higher chance of being exposed to diseases and infections than living in the country. Centuries of exposure to diseases has led to a greater resistance building up in people's genes.

- ① a good way to adapt to city life
- ② the danger of exposure to severe diseases
- ③ disadvantages of urbanization and dense population
- ④ higher resistance to diseases in urban environments
- ⑤ the importance of developing resistance to infections

35. Loss is painful. It's natural for us to grieve over things we've lost. And it takes time to fill the hole left by loss. The larger the hole, the longer it takes to fill it. At some point, though, we need to put painful feelings aside so that we can get on with the business of living. This doesn't mean ignoring or forgetting our loss, but rather, recognizing that life is a gift that we have a responsibility to honor. We honor what we have lost as well when we learn from our loss, take it into who we are, and move on.

- ① things that cause feeling of loss
- ② importance of managing loss in life
- ③ different attitudes to accepting gifts
- ④ tips on increasing profits in the business
- ⑤ seriousness of ignoring our responsibility

36. Bactrian camels에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

Bactrian camels don't live in shifting Sahara sands but in Central and East Asia's rocky deserts. They have two humps storing fat which can be converted to water and energy when food is not available. As their fat runs out, the humps become floppy and loose. Bactrians rarely sweat, helping them conserve fluids for long periods of time. Their bushy eyebrows and two rows of long eyelashes protect their eyes. Big, flat footpads help them navigate the rough rocky areas. The only truly wild camels that still exist are Bactrian camels. These herds survive in the Gobi Desert, but there are less than 1,000.

37. Salmonberry에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

The salmonberry, which can be salmon-colored or reddish, is a raspberry-shaped fruit, and is found across much of the Pacific Northwest. The salmonberry leaf often looks like the shape of butterfly or a man's moustache. The leaves and flowers of the salmonberry come out quite early in the springtime, providing a welcome splash of pink in the early spring. Although the salmonberry has thorns, they are much smaller than those of the blackberry or raspberry bush. The berries can be slightly bitter to sweet, depending upon maturity, and are often eaten by passing hikers. Salmonberries are usually not found for sale except at small farm stands and markets.

The above chart shows the result of a survey about monthly voice and text usage by age conducted by the Nielson Company from April 2009 to March 2010. ① American kids under 18 send and receive roughly 2,800 texts per month, which is the most text-message usage throughout all age groups. ② Meanwhile, people ages 18 to 24 talk on their cell phones more than any other age group. ③ From the youngest age group to the eldest age group, both voice and text usage continue to fall. ④ The text-message usage of kids under 18 is over twice as much as that of people ages 18 to 24. ⑤ Statistically speaking, people ages 65 and older send or receive approximately just one text-message per day.

39. Immortality, which means living forever, has been an unreachable ambition for many people. Now we are getting closer as medicine and science are curing countless diseases. Perhaps in time we will find a way to stop or turn back aging. However, imagine if your problem had nothing to do with sickness or old age—if you had a mental health problem, for instance, or if your partner died before the immortality treatment became available and you were left without him or her forever. You would go completely insane. So if we are able to become immortal, we would be responsible for the suffering that goes along with it.

40. There is a huge difference between saying “You act lazy sometimes.” and “You are a lazy person.” One is suggesting that your laziness is temporary while the other suggests that it's permanent. This is the myth of laziness. People who are lazy aren't really lazy; they simply are people who are temporarily acting that way. What causes a person to be inactive is a lack of goals and purpose. If you give someone a good enough reason to do something, they will do it. People who don't seem to do anything just haven't found a good enough reason to do something.

41. Musical concerts use up a lot of energy and money in electricity. Speakers, lights, and amplifiers all need power to help entertain the audience. However, a new idea that the audience can produce this power is being considered; the members of an audience at a concert are made to take turns pedaling electricity generating bikes. The entire concert's power could be generated without polluting or a need for fossil fuels. In a concert held in Yokohama, for example, four bicycles were set up and connected to a generator. Throughout the show the audience took turns to help power the equipment on the stage.

42. The baobab tree is leafless for most of the year and looks very much like it has its roots sticking up in the air. There are numerous stories offering explanations of how the tree came to be stuffed in the ground upside down. One of the stories says that after it was planted by God it kept moving, so God replanted it upside down. There are also countless superstitions among native African people regarding the powers of the tree. Anyone who dares to pick its flower, for instance, will be eaten by a lion. On the other hand, if you drink water in which the seeds have been soaked, you will be safe from a crocodile attack.

A Russian man named Rasputin developed a reputation for holiness and faith healing. However, he also became known as the "mad monk" because he drank heavily, rarely bathed, and acted strangely.

- (A) Soon he became the most influential person in the government. All of the new appointments in both the Government and Church passed through his hands. He even put his illiterate friend in a high position.
- (B) Despite his odd behaviors, Rasputin had a strong charm that drew many people to him including the Russian empress who had a seriously ill son. When Rasputin showed himself able to heal her son, their bond became truly stronger.
- (C) Many nobles couldn't stand him anymore. To them, Rasputin was no healer; instead, he was using his relationship with the empress for his own benefit. So, they planned to get rid of him and succeeded.

The main reasons are the educational system and the difficulty of communication.

Professional workers from other countries are leaving Korea at an alarming rate. ( ① ) Also, many qualified individuals are hesitant to come to this country, and in many cases it has nothing to do with money or treatment. ( ② ) Because these two requirements are not met, it's only natural that people do not want to come to live here. ( ③ ) In the age of global competition, a country cannot fill its jobs entirely with its own citizens. ( ④ ) A country must import at least some professional manpower from other countries. ( ⑤ ) To do that successfully, however, it must create an attractive living environment for them by minimizing inconveniences.

Throughout history, scientists have wondered about body organs that don't seem to do anything useful. The appendix is a popular example. Actually, we can live without this little worm-like organ. However, a recent study found that the appendix serves as a "safe house" for good bacteria, which help people digest food and fight off "bad" bacteria. Wisdom teeth are another example of a body part with hidden powers. Today, most people get their wisdom teeth removed before they can squeeze other teeth out of place or get infected. However, millions of years ago, human faces weren't as flat as they are today and mouths had more room for wisdom teeth. Our ancestors might have benefited from them when chewing and grinding raw food. *appendix 충수

The cry of a newborn may sound the same to the ears of parents the world over, but according to scientists, that's not the case: Babies cry in the language their parents speak from the first days of life.

An international team of researchers recorded the cries of 60 healthy newborns, three to five days old, 30 born into French-speaking families and 30 born into German-speaking families. French newborns tend to cry with a rising tone, while their German neighbors prefer a falling tone—patterns which fit with the characteristic differences between the two languages. This suggested that baby crying can be distinguished according to their _____.

Lead researcher Kathleen Wermke said this study showed that newborns “are capable of producing different cry tones” and that they prefer tones in the pattern of the language they heard in the womb. *womb 자궁

A farmer owned land along the Atlantic seacoast. Most people were reluctant to work on his farm because they dreaded the awful storms there. He constantly advertised for workers and finally, a short, thin man, well past middle age, approached (a) him.

(B)

To his amazement, he discovered that all of the haystacks had been covered well. The cows were in the barn, and the doors were shut tightly. Everything was tied down. Nothing could blow away. The farmer then understood what the man meant, so (b) he returned to his bed to also sleep while the wind blew.

(C)

“Are you a good farm-hand?” the farmer asked him. “Well, I can sleep when the wind blows,” answered the man. Although puzzled by this answer, (c) he, desperate for help, hired him. The little man worked well around the farm, busy from dawn to dusk, and the farmer felt satisfied with the man's work. Then one night the wind howled loudly in from offshore.

(D)

Jumping out of bed, the farmer rushed next door to the worker's room. (d) He shook the little man and yelled, “Get up! A storm is coming! Tie things down before they blow away!” The little man rolled over in bed and said firmly, “No, sir. I told you, I can sleep when the wind blows.” Angered by the response, the farmer was tempted to fire (e) him on the spot. Instead, he hurried outside to prepare for the storm.
